Wester Ross

Wester Ross Fisheries is one of the oldest Scottish salmon farms still run as an independent family business. This Scottish company is able to demonstrate that the organoleptic properties of its salmon are enhanced by the positive effects of its strict policy on sustainable development.

As the smallest independent salmon farm in Scotland, Wester Ross works with a small team of 55 employees spread over 3 sites. The relatively modest scale of its production, when viewed as a percentage of overall Scottish salmon livestock, enables Wester Ross a far more rigorous selection of only the finest salmon.

A company rooted in tradition and passionate about sustainable salmon farming.

FAO27 COMMENTS:

Each salmon (whole and filleted) bears a Wester Ross tag, to allow the fish to be easily identified, to guarantee the origin and traceability and to highlight the brand's values in terms of salmon welfare and its commitment to environmental and management practices.

Wester Ross holds numerous certifications: its RSPCA Freedom Food certification guarantees the quality of its farming methods including respect for the well-being and gustative properties; Kosher Certified, one of the leading Kosher certification agencies in the world; ISO14001 Environmental Management Standards guarantees the conformity of its facilities and their maintenance, in line with environmental standards; Scottish Industry Code of Good Practices attests to the company's ability to combine quality product and sustainable development.

FAO27 take a real interest in promoting the reasons why these salmon are unique; Wester Ross benefits from the effectiveness of this supply chain partnership.
